02 / EXAMPLE CHECKLIST

PRELIMINARY SITE REVIEW

A desk-based planning due-diligence checklist. Mark each item as checked, requiring further investigation, or not relevant.

---

01 / START WITH EVIDENCE

Record the property and your sources

Site address: _____ Legal description: _____

Review area	Question to ask / information to record
Property	Does the legal description match the address? Are title interests, easements and covenants relevant?
Zoning	Which current land use and regional provisions apply to the intended activity?
Overlays and precincts	Are any mapped controls, designations or precinct provisions relevant?
Activity classification	Which use or development activities and standards may be triggered?
Natural hazards	Do available maps identify flooding, flow paths, coastal or geotechnical issues?
Infrastructure	What is known about water, wastewater, stormwater, network capacity and access?
Existing consents	Are there consent notices, existing approvals, conditions or permitted use records?
Environmental effects	Which effects might warrant technical investigation or AEE discussion?
Building interface	Are separate building consent, design or inspection steps likely to arise?

02 / ACCURACY CHECKS

Avoid false confidence

- Record the map layer name, date, scale and licensing conditions.

- Do not describe an unmapped hazard as proof of safety.
- Do not infer that a development is permitted from zoning alone.
- Check the operative provisions and any current transitional amendments.
- Identify whether survey, engineering, legal, design or specialist advice is needed.

03 / OUTCOMES

Conclude with questions, not promises

List possible pathways, material constraints, evidence gaps and the next practical step. A desktop review does not establish a consent entitlement or a site-specific hazard conclusion.
